Home Learning Association Steps to the Epicenter of America's Homeschooling Movement Launches a Nationwide Program to Support and Represent Homeschoolers

(Englewood, CO) – The Home Learning Association (HLA), the first nationwide organization offering comprehensive support for homeschoolers and their families, opens its virtual doors today. Founded on the vision that homeschooling is a right, and homeschoolers deserve access to every opportunity open to children in traditional schools, the HLA has joined with over a dozen affiliated companies and organizations to enable and assist homeschooling families.

We offer “comprehensive access to everything a family needs to homeschool their children from birth through college,” states Executive Director J. Allen Weston. From participation in talent showcases to inclusion in various special events, previously the domain of public and private schools, the HLA brings together invaluable resources with a low-cost membership fee.

Some of the fun, interactive offerings include a social network and forum, a virtual science fair, debate program, student council and access to extensive virtual libraries full of ebooks and videos. To get children involved and inspired, there are exciting programs for fundraising, adventure travel, mentorship and even a “Future Business Leaders” program, not to mention discounted access to the Q-kids camps and other summertime fun like the 2014 trip to Space Camp. For parents and older students, seminars and webinars as well as post-graduate education support, scholarship programs, and employment assistance add to the mix. An “Ask the Expert” feature allows any member to turn to the HLA for the questions that absolutely stump them.

Parents find the HLA supportive with a monthly newsletter, an upcoming online store, an instructional DVD course for homeschool teachers and discounts at various nationwide chains among other benefits. For more information regarding membership and a free e-book about homeschooling visit the [Home Learning Association](http://Home Learning Association) website.

About the Home Learning Association:

Founded in 2013, the HLA has begun a quest to assist in organizing, coordinating and advancing the growing homeschool movement for the benefits of all “Terra Scholars” and their families. The HLA's leading principles are Empower, Connect and Inspire: Empower parents to lead their children to educate themselves wherever they are. Connect Terra Scholars from across the country so they can build strong bonds that enrich their success. Inspire students to become the best they can be and to continue their quest for knowledge throughout their lives.
